MURDER A MYSTERY

A Crippled Shoemaker Killed and Terribly Mutilated.

NO CLUE TO THE ASSAILANT

Coroner's Inquest Fails to Solve the Problem.

DETECTIVES AT WORK

One of the most brutal murders in the history of crime in the District was committed last night some time between 8 and 9 o'clock on 9th street northwest. A most remarkable feature of the murder was the fact that it took place within half a block of the eighth precinct station house. The room in which the killing was done showed that there had been a fierce and determined struggle, yet not a sound was heard outside the little shanty to give the alarm to passers-by. Six policemen were held in reserve at the station house during the evening, yet they had not the slightest suspicion nor any reason to suspect that murder was being done so near at hand.

Wesley Hall, a middle-aged colored shoe maker, occupied the one-room house, No. 2101 9th street. He was a hunchback and crippled, and unable to move about without the aid of crutches. Last evening he was the aid of crutches. Last evening he was busily engaged on a pair of shoes, in a hurry to get through to go to church. About 7:45 o'clock a colored woman who lives near by, Mrs. Frances Trusty, passed Hall's house, and seeing him at work inside, spoke to him and asked the time.

About three hours later the again passed side, spoke to him and asked the time.

About three hours later she again passed Hall's house on her way home from church. She called to him, but received no answer, and seeing the door partly open, she vontured in. Her attention was first attracted by the great disorder of the room, and looking around, she saw Hall lying on the floor. He was lying in a nool of blood, with looking around, she saw Hall lying on the looking around, she saw Hall lying on the floor. He was lying in a pool of blood, with his legs resting up against a little stove. The furniture was thrown about and broken, and on the floor, walls and ceiling were great blotches of blood. The woman hurried out and aroused a neighbor, William Clemens, who at once notified the police. Badly Mutilated.

Sergt. Montgomery ran to the house and made a thorough examination. Hall was badly cut and beaten. On the floor was a brick, covered with blood, with which he had evidently been struck again and again. It was evident that a chair was also used as a weapon, and a hlow from this crushed in the head of the poor little shocmaker. A razor was also found, covered with blood, and there were deep gashes about the head and neck of the murdered man. From the appearance of the room it would seem as if Hall's assailant had chased him seem as if Hall's assailant had chased him from corner to corner, cuating or striking him with the club every time he came within reach. There were signs of a desperate struggle, showing that Hall had fought vainly for his life. The surprising feature of it all is that, inasmuch as he was not killed by a single blow, he did not make such an outcry as would summon relief. Clemens lived next door to the unfortunate man, and the two houses are separated only by a thin wooden partition. It seems incredible that Clemens, who was in his room all the evening, heard nothing of the assault. Yet he claims to have heard absolutely nothing in the way of an unusual or alarming sound.

Robbery the Motive.

Robbery the Motive.

There was not a single clue that would lead to the discovery of the murderer. So far as the police could learn last night, no suspicious-looking person was seen to enter Hall's house or loiter in the neighborhood. That robbery was the motive was shown by the fact that a small toy savings bank, which contained about $5, had been taken out of the trunk and smashed to pieces and the contents appropriated. pleces and the contents appropriated. A silver watch which Hall wore was also taken. The murderer must have been covered with blood before he finished his ghastly work, and could not have gone through the streets for any great distance without being detected. While no theory has yet been advanced by the police. appropriated. has yet been advanced by the police, the inclined to the belief that some one in the immediate neighborhood committed the crime, and there was talk last night of searching the houses for bloody clothing before it could be destroyed by the mur-derer.

It is thought that the murder was committed about two hours previous to the dis-covery, as the body was cold and rigid when discovered. Policemen Stuart and Boswell passed the house about 10 o'clock, and Sergt. Montgomery passed there a few minutes before that hour. Another officer passed up and down 9th street past the house several times during the evening, but heard nothing to attract his attention at any time.

Church Funds.

The murdered man was treasurer of the Colored Lutheran Church Lyceum, but had turned over the money in his hands a few days before. Rev. Mr. Wiseman, pastor of the church, was called, but he could offer no suggestions except those that presented themselves to other observers. He said the dead man had been a regular attendant at his church, and had lived a quiet, orderly life, making his living by cobbling. Hall was a single man. A cousin, Hezekiah Prather, occupied the room with him, but he is employed at the 14th street power house at nights and sleeps during the day. The old man was alone at nights.

His Cousin.

Prather arrived at the house about 1 o'clock this morning. He identified the razor as his property, and said that the last time he saw it was several days ago, when he placed it in the bureau drawer. The bank which had been broken open and robbed by the murderer also belonged to Prather. Prather said that he left the house to go to work about 6:45, and had not heard of his cousin's death until notified by telephone.

This Morning. The further investigation of the murder today simply served to deepen the mystery surrounding the case. The room in which the little hunchback met his death is perhaps eight or ten feet square. It was decently furnished, and in one corner was a book case filled with books, for Hall was quite fond of reading, and was regarded in the neighborhood as a well-informed man. He was talkative, and very fond of a good-natured disputation-like most cob

In the center of the room stood the little In the center of the room stood the little box-stove. In the struggle it was broken and the stove pipe was pulled out of place. Hall was evidently dressing to go out when he was attacked, for when the body was found it was partly clothed in his Sunday best. The interior of the room presents a ghastly appearance by daylight. There is blood everywhere, and it seems impossible that the assailant could have escaped with that the assailant could have escaped with-out being drenched with it. The police are seeking to get some trace of bloody clothseeking to get some trace of bloody cloth-ing somewhere in the neighborhood, but so far without success. They also hope to get some clue through the physicians of the city, for it is thought that the murderer must have received some sort of injuries during the scuffle that would require medical treatment. . Strange Features.

The horrible mutilation of the body is one of the most difficult features of the case to understand. The right side of the man's throat was cut from the ear downward for a distance of several inches. Yet the razor with which this was done was locked up in a bureau drawer along with the little toy bank when the murderer entered the house. It is evident that the man's skull was crushed with the brick before his throat was cut, and he may have been dead even then. There were jagged cuts about the shoulders, and his nose and right though were both magnetic to stell reference. thumb were both mashed to a jelly. He was a little wizened-up man, who was unable to move without the aid of crutches, and the murderer seems to have taken malicious pleasure in the mutilation of his victim. He must have remained some lit-tle time in the room after the murder, for he made a thorough examination of the razor in his right hand.

The police of the eighth precinct have three colored men locked up, but simply as witnesses, for there is nothing in the way of direct evidence against any one of them, and it is said that all can prove a satisfactory alibi without the slightest difficulty. Detective Henry H. Lacey, who is particularly clever in ferreting out crimes among the colored element of the community, has been assigned to the case, but admitted this afternoon that there was not the slightest clue to work on. He thinks that one of the colored men who are locked up knows more about the case than he has yet told, and may yet say something that may give the police the scent.

The Inquest.

The inquest over the body was held at 11 o'clock this morning at the eighth precinct station. Dr. Glazebrook, the deputy coroner, testified as to the autopsy he made this morning.

Dr. Glazebrook stated that he found on the side of the man's head a fracture four by six inches in size. This was a fatal wound, although it might not have caused the neck was a deep cut, evidently made by a sharp instrument. The carotid artery was severed, and this alone was sufficient to cause death in a few minutes. Besides this, the right thumb was fractured, as by some blunt instrument, and the nose was broken. There were other cuts around the body. The doctor said that in all his experience he had never seen a worse used

From the fact that the razor used in cutting Hall was one that was locked in a bureau in the room, and that this bureau drawer was broken into, Dr. Glazebrook expressed the opinion that Hall was first knocked senseless by the brick that was found on the floor and then slashed with Finding the Body.

Policeman Barrett, the first man to reach the scene of the murder, and Frances Trusty testified as to what they saw at the house last night, but they were unable to throw any additional light on the mystery. Frances said that she was at a rehearsal for a concert last night. Clemens, who was held last night on suspicion, was there with her last night on suspicion, was there with her last night, but left a few minutes before she did and walked home with a young colored girl.

Hezekiah Prather, who lived with Hall, was next questioned, but as he left the house last night before 7 o'clock he did not know very much about the occurrence. He identified the razor and the little bank as his property.

Prather was asked by Coroner Hammett whether he had any suspicion as to who committed the murder. He said he had not the slightest idea. Hall was a quiet, inoffensive sort of man, who had many friends among the colored people in the neighbor-good and who never seemed to make any Possible Clue.

Policeman Yoe testified that some time ago he arrested a young colored man named Eugene Alexander for housebreaking. Alexander and Hall were formerly friends. and Hall gave the evidence that resulted in sending Alexander to the Reform School. The man is now at liberty, and has been arrested several times since for minor ored men who were arrested by Policeman Murphy last night as witnesses, said that he was at the house last evening calling upon Hall. The old man, he said, was great for debates, and last evening when he was over there they were discussing the Cuban question. He left the house a few minutes after 7 o'clock and did not see Hall again.

The inquest was then adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in the hope that by that time there may be some eviience they can go on.

HIGH PRAISE

Memory.

At a meeting of the standing committee of the diocese of Washington held Monday afternoon suitable action was taken upon the death of Rev. Dr. Addison, the late rector of Trinity Church. Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott presided, and Rev. Dr. R. H. Mc-Kim offered the resolution that an appropriate minute should be placed on record as an expression of their deep sense of sorrow and of loss. In part, the minute was as follows:

stood in this city as a strong pillar of faith and righteousness. Steadily, bravely, consistenly and with a manly courage worthy of all honor, he has personified here at the capital of the nation the best qualities of the Christian man and the Christian bes of the Christian man and the Christian miristry. It is not easy to estimate the full worth of such a life, shining steadily through a long course of years, without paling and without flickering. The least paling and without flickering. The least that we can content ourselves with saying is that it has been a benediction to this community, and now that its pure light has been extinguished in death, we reflect with saddened hearts how great is the loss to the church and to the people of Washington.

"For many years Dr. Addison's voice had been influential in the dicese of Maryland, and upon her daughter, the young dicese of Washington, his death falls as a distinct bereavement. The soundness of his learning, the breadth of his sympathies, his fidelity to the faith, his openness of mind, his transparent honesty, his fearlessness and his rare generosity of soul made him a wise and trusted counsellor, whose pres-ence will be sadly missed in the life and work of the diocese."
